The Story behind the Namejs Ring

As ancient lore has it, the three ancient tribes of Latvia were engaged in constant strife, which made them vulnerable to foreign attacks. Foreign armies did not hesitate to exploit this weakness. But in the 13th century, a Latvian chieftain by the name of Namejs realized that the only way the three tribes of Latvia could defend themselves against foreign invasion was through unity. He commissioned a smith to forge a ring, which would symbolize the inherited bond between the three tribes. Three separate bands wrap around each other forming a braid, with a thread-like chain binding the three, making them one.

Over the years, the Namejs Ring has become one of the foremost expressions of Latvian identity.

Individually Hand Crafted Jewelry

Each piece created by Raimonds Narunovskis is hand created from silver. While some save time creating Namejs Rings from a wax cast mold process, BalticShop.com only sells hand-made Namejs Rings, as seen here, where Narunovskis also creates each woven article. Each of his Saulīte (Sun) Pendants are also hand cut, not cast. Notice how the traditional Latvian Līgavas' Ring spiral base is decorated with a hand-etched design.

Warm and well wicking, these hats offer a funky style that you can show yourself, bending, tying and squishing the individual points and braids. An Estonian storekeeper who introduced us to these hats (a huge fan herself) sold us on them when she said: "You know people will smile when you wear this hat!"

The inextinguishable flares of Latvian patriotism and national self-awareness have given strong impulses for the creation of many classical and contemporary musical masterpieces by Latvian composers since the second half of the 19th century. Among those, perhaps the three most important works are the cantatas recorded on this CD. They have retained their artistic value up to the present day, having become especially pertinent with a new significance in the context of the third renaissance of the Latvian culture.

Andrejs Jurjāns - Cantata "To My Fatherland" (words by Andrejs Jurjāns), Lilija Greidane, soprano.

The Latvian Radio Choir, Symphony Orchestra of Latvian National Opera, conductor Leonids Vigners.
