

INTRODUCTION

WELCOME TO BALTICSHOP!

In our winter catalogue you will find many things to brighten up the darkest time of the year for yourself and your loved ones.

As always, we bring you the best of what Baltic artisans have to offer. We love the quality of the hand-made straw and reed ornaments and traditional, folk-art inspired ceramics, which are not only beautiful and practicable, but also very much in fashion in this increasingly ecology conscious world. Folk music has also never gone out of style: we have just the instruments – the Latvian kokle and various flutes – to make sweet music at all those traditional festivities.

We have much to cheer about this season: BalticShop is proud to have participated in the Kids First Fund project of building a family shelter for 30 mothers and children in Rugāji, in the Latgale region of Latvia. The miles and miles of geothermal piping buried in the ground provide the heat and hot water, helping this to become a warm and cozy place for abused children and their mothers. Our contribution took the form of proceeds from the limited edition of Feeding Frenzy: The Wild New World of San Jose Sharks by famous Latvian goalie Arturs Irbe, which was sold through our catalogue.

With little ones in mind, we have selected for you the cute, hand-made felt bears that are a favorite with Estonian kids. They are so small they could easily fit into our little woolen purses lovingly woven with Estonian national ornaments, but they are really so cuddly your child may not want to lose sight of them even for a moment. The purse will come in handy for storing some other treasure. There is also a range of gifts for Him and Her to choose from, as well as an array of items that will help you to capture that Christmas spirit.

As always, you can order these and other items by phone or online. For our complete catalogue please go to www.balticshop.com. We are sure you will find many things that will bring cheer to you and those you hold dear.

Peace and Joy to you this Holiday Season!

Archeological evidence suggests that the men and women of ancient Baltic and Finno-Ugric tribes liked to wear jewelry. Both an adornment and a means of payment, the earliest samples found were made of amber, seashells, bone, and copper, with gold and silver complementing and replacing these in later centuries. Baltic artisans continue the fine traditions of the past, and modern Estonians, Latvians, and Lithuanians are proud to wear jewelry that is either a faithful reproduction of an actual piece or inspired by ethnic motifs.

Amber jewelry

At least since Roman times, when it was a great trade commodity, the Baltic lands have been associated with amber. To this day, amber in all shades, from almost black to pearly white, is found along the Baltic coast and set into beautiful necklaces, brooches, rings, and pendants by master jewelers. We are sure that our collection will have that special something for even the most discerning customer.

The Narunovskis Collection is among BalticShop's most popular items. Small wonder, for master jeweler Raimonds Narunovskis is famous for the care, precision, and imagination that he lavishes on each and every item. All the pieces - from Namejs ring to the Sun pendant - in this collection are meticulously hand-crafted, are not cast, and as such are truly unique.

Latgale, the eastern region of Latvia, is where the centuries-old tradition of pottery-making is very much alive, being inherited from father to son to grandson. The colorful ceramics – bowls, plates, candelabras – in their vibrant hues borrowed from the earth and Latgale's many lakes add the warmth of a midsummer day to any interior. Of course, Latgale is not the only place in Latvia where the pottery wheels and kilns are busy: the elegant contemporary pieces we have selected you will find in our online catalogue.

CD LT

What is the one toy from your childhood that you treasure the most? For most of us, it is the teddy bear – worn, a little shabby perhaps, because it has been loved and cuddled so much. Well, we think there can hardly be anything cuddlier than these colorful teddies hand-made of soft wool by Estonian master-craftspeople. Treasure them, collect them, or give them as gifts – they are sure to put a smile on anyone's face, no matter what their age.

REFERENCE BOOKS

- Local chef Mārtiņš Sirmāis wrote the bestselling book "Sirmā Latvija" (Latvia According to Sirmāis) based on his popular television show and featuring local, seasonal foods. Yet the definitive traditional Latvian cookbook surely has to be Ņina Mašļūne's Latvian National Kitchen, which has been translated into English. It contains recipes for all the dishes that Mārtiņš has had the privilege to try when visiting friends and relatives, at birthday parties, Christmas, and many other occasions. He has based his recipes on Masiļūne's book to cook rabbit and goose at Christmas, pork ribs and sauerkraut on Independence Day, pastries, potato pancakes, hot soups, cold soups, and, of course, wild mushroom dishes.

After tasting Mārtiņš' cuisine people always say "That's how my mother used to cook!"

Jonas Mekas (born in 1922) is a Lithuanian exile poet, prose writer and the winner of the Lithuanian National Prize of Culture and Art (in 1995). The Lithuanian homestead is a document of the history of our people. Our ethnic culture is like the trunk of a tree connecting us by its roots with the nation's past. Everything in the farmstead was considered in detail: space, distance, forms, materials, colours, and comfort. It seems as though everything has been planned and ordered in a similar way but every farmstead is different and every region is individual.

The city tells a different story to each one of us, at the same time both confident and shy, provincial and cosmopolitan, rooted in the past and strangely divorced from it. This guidebook aims to tell a few of these stories, without taking away from visitors the pleasure of discovering the city for themselves.

This CD is a first attempt at unfolding the wide variety of approaches to sutartinės, demonstrating the transformations and interpretations that are possible today. The words of Father Adolfas Sabaliauskas (credited with "discovering" sutartinės), written more than a century ago, were prophetic: "We can merely write down as many melodies as possible. Sutartinės will be a limitless source of tonal material for works that will shake the depths of the Lithuanian soul and preserve a Lithuanian citizen's immortal nature. They will flood not only the souls of Lithuanians, but also those of foreigners who have a sense for real beauty."

6. Muzikantu pasakas ("Fairy Tales About Musicians: Fairy Tales and Songs Accompanied by Latvian Folk Instruments")

Ever since ancient times, musicians have been wonderful storytellers. They have also been the protagonists of numerous fairy tales in which their musical instruments have always played an important role. This album by folk musician Ilga Reizniece IS designed for small children, tells a series of folk tales found in a 100-year-old collection of folklore. In the background of each story you will hear the instrument mentioned in the tale. The wonderfully illustrated CD booklet introduces the listener to simple instruments, like the recorder, whistle, horn, and drums, as well as more exotic instruments, such as the Jew's harp, the kokle, and bagpipes.

Margarita Stāraste

In her long career, Margarita Stāraste has illustrated more than 20 Latvian children's books. It is no exaggeration when we say that there is not a Latvian alive in Latvia today who does not hold Stāraste's charming realm of personified flowers, bugs and animals as one of their fondest childhood memories. In her 93rd year, the artist continues to bring her magical world alive, and we are happy to offer you a selection of her best-known work.

BOOKS IN ENGLISH

1. The Baltic Way to Freedom, in English, hardcover, 480 p., 10" x 8", #4079, $38
The hands of the Baltic nations joined from Tallinn via Riga to Vilnius in a moment of human unity. Conductors' arms were raised to unite us in the songs of the singing revolution. The fists of farmers who had been left without their land were raised. The sign of victory was shown by fingers that were numb from the long slumber. The Baltic way to freedom was the non-violent fight of the good and clean hands against the evil, treacherous and unclean hands.
